I will miss Ms. Ilene's hugs and sparkling eyes. She made an effort to engage the youngest generation, putting women's rights on the radar for many. She was a social justice warrior, a pioneer for women, and a fine example of how to speak truth to power, especially in the Deep South, where her voice was much needed.

Ilene always had an amazing adventure to share with us on our trips to Huntsville of people she had met, places she had gone, and protests she had attended. She dressed to the nines and was always waiting for us when we pulled up, even when we were early, which was rare. She was very active and enthusiastic in our church community, and enjoyed socializing, especially on potluck Sunday.

When we returned to her nursing home after the services, she always wanted to share her copious genealogy scrapbooks with us. She was proud of not only her family's accomplishments, but her collection of these accomplishments. She also loved to share interesting articles with me that she thought my students would like to read and was generous with her time and resources.
