“ I remember the days working for Whitaker contracting paving roads with Bo Daddy as our foreman. Those were some of the most fun times at we thought they were despite all the heat and hard work. Cooking steaks in the spreader hopper didn't make for such bad lunch breaks either. You'll be missed BO.

“ I havent stopped looking for you since you left even the smell of you lingers in the air, I love you more then I ever knew I could.I feel like this shouldn't even be affecting me so much in a way that it affects my whole daily routine,my whole train of thought none of it seems real because it was just so fast everything was so fast but even though i want to say their is a peace with me in your absence , its crazy because nothing feels the same to me, time feels like its frozen im still waiting to hear you voice when i walk into your room but everything is at a stand still, im trying to except the fact that you arnt here anymore to cut up with me or tell me any of your jokes or to hear any of your stories. Your not here to tell us how proud of us you are or to express to me just how much you love momma rhonda and everyone of your babies or how much tou have grown to love me. Jesse and I are going to miss you but most of all im going to miss the way Jesse would always tell me how youd ask for me when he went to visit you on his off days when I would be at working and hed call me just so we could talk on thr phone Ill always remember the way you would ask him ' where's bethy? You would say, 'you tell my bethy Im so proud of her and I love her, or even those days you would just randomly call to tell me how much you have been thinking about me and needed to tell me you loved me and now im just here thinking "well who's going to call me now? Man', what i would give for one last conversation with you , One last drive, One last hug to see and hear you chuckle at your own words. Now all their is are the memories so I will take every memory ,every single one of them I have with you, every word you ever spoke to me, every lesson learned along the way and carry it with me, and everytime I look up to the sky I will listen for you ,until we meet again Dad ,REST in the arms of Jesus. We love you.
